

KEY ACCESSORY

PALM has finally realised that, while technology can make things smaller, many of its users have great sausagey fingers, simply unable to cope with all those tiny rubber buttons. This full-size keyboard has a built-in docking station, is compatible with any Palm m100, III and VIII organiser or IBM WorkPad, and folds up to the size of a toasted cheese sandwich with no butter. $249, call Gowings on 1800 803 304

ONE IN THE HAND

WITH a screen 50 per cent bigger than the standard Game Boy, amazing resolution and astonishing running speed, Nintendo's Game Boy Advance gives you a portable arcade to play with. New versions of old games standards (including Super Mario) have also been launched to ensure that your social life, and eventually your ability to communicate with others, will wither and die. ALL EARS

FORGET the whole thing: forget wires, forget clipping things to yourself, changing music over, lugging stuff in your pocket, the lot. With Panasonic's SV-SD05 MP3 player, everything you need is in the tiny cans attached to your ears, downloaded onto the thin yet elephantine memory card that goes inside them. Just don't forget it. $1049, call Panasonic on 13 26 00

FIND IT EASY

IF THEY'D only had eTrex, The Blair Witch Project would have been called Well, Here We are Back at the Car, Then. It has automatic track logging and multiple-map zoom, it's able to store hundreds of way points, and it's in constant touch with satellites, so this rugged personal navigator won't let you get lost, even if you do have a camcorder and snot coming out your nose. $389, from Mountain Designs, call (02) 9267 3822

ONE OFF THE WRIST

DON'T wonder why Casio does things, just thank your boyhood gods it does. The resolution on this piece of digital tomfoolery produces a black-and-white image best described as "something", but hey, it's a camera. In a watch. $379, call Casio on (02) 9370 9100
