Eric's work experience RACE DRIVER

JOB DESCRIPTION

Duties: Win races
Equipment: Formula 4000 race car with a 3.8L V6 engine
Skills: Natural ability, proven experience in karts and Formula Ford, and a cool, calculating mind. Panicky workies still on their Ps need not apply
Pay: At this level, the driver pays for everything: the car, fuel, breakages, living expenses, the lot. It could cost anywhere from $80-200k per season. On current pocket money, Eric will be ready around the year 10,006
Prospects: Not great, even if you're a young, keen, rich and talented driver who wants to get into F1. For Eric, it's actually mathematically impossible to get worse odds

THE chances of me, a simple workie, ever driving a Formula One car are the same as me working out alphabetical filing. Here are a few things Michael Schumacher has that I don't: hardcore competitive instinct, 100 million bucks, a big chin, an excellent wife, a German accent and several world titles. All I have is the will to succeed and a single drive in a Formula 3000 race car. Formula 3000 (we call it 4000 in Australia) is one step down from F1. # Does size matter?

GIVE ME THE BEEF

CLAIRE / 25

"If it's tiny and they don't know what to do, that's no good. If it's big and they don't know what to do, that's no good, either. The main key is knowing what to do with it."

ANNA / 20

"Of course it matters. If they've got less skill it's easier to have good sex if it's bigger."

ADELE / 30

"It's all in the technique."

RHIANNON / 19

"No, it doesn't matter at all. It's what you do with it. It's all about love."

DORA / 22

"It does matter, because it's a bit of a disappointment if you get down to it and there's nothing there. But it doesn't have to be massive."

AMANDA / 22

"It's not the most important thing. I think it depends on the person; everyone has a perfect size. Small might be good for one person, but not for someone else."

RACHEL / 25

"You boys are too paranoid. It definitely doesn't matter."

"I like it large"

"Not too small, now"

"Fine with all sizes"
